Palm Beach County to host many great food festivals this fall

Palm Beach County will host a series of exciting food festivals this fall, each celebrating the diversity and innovation of the region's culinary scene.

'The Palm Beach Food & Wine Festival serves as a platform to recognize and celebrate the exceptional talents of our chef community.'

Tim Lipman
owner of Coolinary

The highlight of the season, the Palm Beach Food & Wine Festival, is scheduled for Dec. 12-15. This year's event will feature more than 60 restaurants and more than 100 wineries, with part of the proceeds supporting Ernie Els' Els for Autism Foundation. Guests can enjoy unique dinners, tastings and seminars, with notable chefs including Robert Irvine, Duff Goldman, Michelle Bernstein and Maneet Chauhan headlining the event. Participating restaurants include Aioli, Coolinary, Pink Steak, La Sirena, PB Catch Seafood & Raw Bar, and Meat Market, among many others.

Tim Lipman, owner of Coolinary, shared his enthusiasm, saying, "The Palm Beach Food & Wine Festival serves as a platform to recognize and celebrate the exceptional talents of our chef community, solidifying Palm Beach County's reputation as a remarkable culinary hub."

Other Palm Beach County food festivals

The Florida Game Dinner at Tropical Smokehouse on Nov. 21 will offer a distinctive menu featuring items such as jerk duck wings and smoked venison loin.

Dining in the Dark in West Palm Beach on Nov. 17, hosted by Florida Outreach for the Blind, offers a three-course meal served in complete darkness by the Palm Beach Sheriff's Office SWAT team.

South Florida Strawberry Festival at South County Regional Park starts on Jan. 17, 2025, celebrating Florida's status as the top winter strawberry producer.

South Florida Garlic Fest, the "best stinkin' party in South Florida," will kick off in Wellington on Feb. 1, 2025.

Bacon & Bourbon Festival will take place March 22-23, 2025, at the Wellington Town Center Promenade.

With a full schedule of festivals, Palm Beach County is ready to serve up an unforgettable season for food lovers and adventurers alike.
